

St. Louis University School of Nursing Students

Join in Coalition Prevention efforts

The Coalition was very lucky to have two wonderful nurses from SLU School of Nursing doing an internship with us this summer. Both Caroline Rowe, R.N. and Colleen Crewe, R.N. are critical care nurses and moms. They researched lead poisoning and prevention strategies and developed a wonderful “Lead Prevention through Nutrition” program complete with Powerpoint slides and a fun game to drive home the message that “good nutrition helps lessen lead absorption.”

This dynamic pair presented the program to new and expectant moms at Our Lady’s Inn in St. Louis and to a Nutrition for Families class at East Side Health District in East St. Louis. They also prepared a handy shopping list of $1 -$3 foods and provided wonderful attendance prizes for all – a tote bag full of nutritious and tasty foods.

We thank them both for all their efforts.